Jodi Arias rolls in -

I have been inundated with many questions on how I feel about her sentence considering I'm on Death row and did not kill anyone, yet Arias beat the Death Penalty Twice and committed a Brutal act. It's a perplexing issue with a plethora of complex insight. As I sat and awaited this -wow- factor that everyone has made such a deal about, I am disappointed by my own expectations, because instead of a brazen, cocky woman a rather docile average brunette with crooked teeth comes walking onto 30 yard and next to me, she does exude confidence with a mannerism of a librarian (I'm blown away) no -wow- Just another woman convicted of murder given Life, even though she is not just another woman to the world outside of prison. In Prison however it is not so spectacular, The Yard is full of killers in a varying degree & some way worse than Arias. She is isolated, not allowed to shop, write, call or communicate with other inmates or her family zero. She is allowed one Book, one jump suite. Two T-shirts 1 sets of undergarments, one blanket -wool- one sheet, one Towel.

That's it, it will change at some point.

What I found interesting is she seemed concerned about how her closing statement at sentencing came across and I was very honest and told her it was insensitive, diabolical and showed that she lied by remembering some of her acts. I feel that a life sentence was a blessing for the Alexander family to not be put through 25 yrs of appeals & media with a 65% chance of overturn or conversion to life, would have been a tragedy in itself. Life in Perryville is hard time and unlike other prison systems Arizona does not do much to care for inmates, I don't think Doc is mistreating her and I am silently observing her, I will write a more inclusive piece on what I really think if there seems to be an interest. If you have any questions or curiosities regarding Sadi Arias write me directly or via my Facebook, I would ask that you respect my webmaster and keep it appropriate I will be very clear I am not a supporter of her actions, but nor do I sit in judgement of her, she has been tried, sentenced. God will see to the rest.
